

Stop the madness. Why are we so bound to repeat the mistakes of the past. Adam Smith, Abe Lincoln, and Thomas Jefferson would be weeping tears of sorrow at the state of our government, bending to the will of corporate power. Competition is being stifled and the consumer is suffering. Not to mention that the state of our "democracy" is a joke, not when corporations are treated as human beings, not when the voice of money mongering human and non human entities are swallowing up human rights and the environment, not when the voice of the wealthy few is valued over the majority. Wake up to this reality of our society and do what is right. If not, your tenure is short. The American people will restore the balance of power if there is still any spirit left in this great country. Choose what is right for the American public and stop the conglomeration of major media. Otherwise we are walking down a path toward a single viewed, single opinionated, dollar motivated, media outlet that will bend popular thought to its profit seeking will. This does not sound like the America I want to be a part of. So join the growing force of change and thwart this rise of global corporate domination.
